

Assetinsure Surety Bonds / Contract Performance Bonds Information Sheet

Bank Guarantees vs. Surety Bonds backed by Swiss Re

SAME AS A BANK GUARANTEE

GUARANTEED BY SWISS RE

ASSETINSURE LARGEST PROVIDER

1. Type of Document:

- Both are unconditional and irrevocable undertakings issued by a Bank or Swiss Re International SE;
- Both are payable on demand and have the same wording and legal obligations;
- Common names for a Contract Performance Bond include: Bond, Surety Bond, Insurance Bond, Unconditional Undertaking, Bank Guarantee (if issued by a Bank).

2. Strength of Document:

- Bank Guarantees are backed by the financial strength of the Bank issuing the document;
- Swiss Re Bonds are backed by the financial strength of Swiss Re International SE, a wholly owned subsidiary of the Swiss Re Group.
- Swiss Re International SE has the same Standard & Poor's credit rating as that of the 4 major Australian banks, being AA-. (refer attached Ratings Table);
- Swiss Re Bonds are widely accepted by a large number of corporate entities and also government agencies at Federal, State and Local Authority level (refer attached Beneficiaries Extract) and meets the Treasury guidelines of all State Government Treasuries.

3. Claims Process:

- Same process is undertaken for a Bank Guarantee and a Swiss Re Bond;
- Bonds can be presented locally for claiming;
- Bond claim can be made via email with original claim notice plus original bond sent to us via registered post.
- Following confirmation, the amount claimed is paid within 8 hours, usually into a nominated account or by cheque. As an unconditional undertaking, it is stressed that there is no requirement to prove that there has been a lack of performance or any further justification for making the claim;
- Bonds are not subject to an "insurance style claims process", as they are not an insurance product.

4. Common Misconceptions:

- "A Swiss Re Bond is an insurance policy";
- "A Swiss Re Bond doesn't have the same obligations as a bond issued by a bank";
- "Insurance companies aren't as secure as banks";
- "It's more difficult to make a claim on a Swiss Re International SE Bond".
